Photo Camp: Landscape Photography

*Learn to Take Great Photographs
Instead of Snapshots
With Your Digital Camera!*

The emphasis of Photo Camp is on teaching campers how to take a great image with a digital camera. Led by professional landscape painter and photographer Greg Zook, Photo Camp participants will learn about composition, lighting, contrast, focus and depth of field. You will learn how to get the most out of your specific camera and when to use manual settings for more control and flexibility.

Each day begins with a pre-breakfast photo hike to take advantage of the beautiful early morning light. After breakfast, you can practice photo techniques, complete assignments, or attend the general PSWIRL keynote speaker and workshops. During an afternoon lecture, Greg will discuss photographic concepts, show illustrations of techniques, review campers' photos, and demonstrate the photographic exercise for the next day. He will go over specifics for each participant's camera as well. The rest of the afternoon and evening will be available to attend general PSWIRL activities or shoot more photographs.

Wednesday afternoon, participants will work with Greg to create a slide show of their best photographs for presentation to the rest of the camp on Thursday evening.

There will be no printing or working with the computer to correct a bad image after it has been taken. Use of a tripod is recommended but not essential.

Join us for an intensive individualized photography experience.

All photographs used in this brochure were taken by participants in previous Photo Camps.
